Highway Humor

A man buys a sports car and is really beginning to enjoy it when he sees flashing lights in the rear view mirror. He guns it and is rapidly up to 160 mph when he realizes what he is doing. He slows down, then pulls over and soon the cop pulls up behind him.

The cop comes up to the window and asks, "What were you thinking, taking off like that?"

"Well," the man replies after thinking about it for a bit, "a few years ago a highway patrol officer ran off with my wife."

"What does that have to do with anything."

"I thought you were bringing her back."

So i took my car to big o, had tires installed and an alignment done. The alignment was not right at all after spending a couple hours there. I called these guys, asked if they could do the alignment for me it was 4 30 in the afternoon they actually said sure! To ad to my disbelief that they could be that awesome, while i was waiting an older disabled military vet who had a hard time speaking came in and gestured and kind of communicated that he head just been pulled over and that the registration was out on his new car. Well these guys helped the man right there on the spot and got his car registered online! Amazing! They didnt have to help at all but they did, it meant more to me to witness that then great job they did getting my alignment straightened out perfectly. To ad to that they seen i had a rear light out they fixed it no charge! Buisness excellence! Way to go guys! Keep up the incredible work!

I took my 2005 Equinox to them last Tuesday before thanksgiving. It needed a new radiator, timing cover seal, and oil pan seal. They were going to be closed for the thanksgiving weekend so they fixed everything and 1 more item that wasn't caught on the initial inspection by 6 pm on Wednesday! They even called me today to make sure my son made it back to Colorado in the Equinox. Talk about customer service. Awesome job guys and thank you again!

What does the Ford Mustang mean for America?

Here's the story of Wild Horse Annie, and how she reignited the glory of the Mustang:

Mrs. Velma Johnston typed letters, filed carbon copies, and answered the phone at the insurance office where she worked as a secretary. She dressed conservatively, smiled often, and spoke kindly. She sat with good posture, as good as she was able, as long as she could.

Her husband Charlie drove her to work each day through the dun-colored hills of Virginia City, Nevada.

From her window, she could see some of the few wild horses that still ran free.

One day in 1950, Velma looked ahead at a truck they followed through the hills. When they grew close, Velma gasped. Blood ran from truck and dripped on the road. Wild horses had been gathered violently and crammed in the bed. Mares and studs had trampled a yearling under their hooves. The truck turned, and headed out of town toward a cannery, where wild horses were bought for a few cents a pound and killed for pet food.

Velma couldn't breathe. When she got home that day, she began to make phone calls. She began to ask questions. She found out the grisly truth about the mustangs and what would happen to them next. She resolved to put an end to the slaughter, however she could. She would fight for the dignity of wild horses from that day, for the rest of her life, from her county seat, to the Nevada state Capitol, then finally, to Washington, D.C.

This is the story of how Velma Bronn Johnston became Wild Horse Annie.

- 4 Cloves of Minced Garlic
- 1/2 Cup of Chopped Cilantro

3. Slice thinly across the grain and serve.
